MISSION: To create and support meaningful community engagement and to facilitate community partnerships through new and innovative opportunities which elevate City services and the quality of life in Plano.
SHORTER TERM VOLUNTEERING IS BECOMING A NATIONAL TREND

This has been a stimulating year for VIP staff. New departments continue to request information on how to utilize volunteers. At the same time, we are continuing to form alliances inside with City staff and outside with our new neighbors and corporations. Yet, we are noticing a trend that is showing a shift in the volunteer environment towards shorter term volunteering. This shift is being felt all around the US.

The Minnesota Association for Volunteer Administration has been researching this shift. Their survey, Shorter Term Volunteer Commitments, explores how the trend is affecting them and what strategies agencies are using to respond. Here are some of the comments:

- Time is the main limiting factor.
- 80% of the agencies expect the shorter term volunteer trend to grow.
- The top reason for involving short-term volunteers is a hope they will return.
- Most organizations are planning to make changes to address this trend in the future.

This trend is perplexing and difficult for all agencies, including us, since much of what we need done doesn’t fit with short-term volunteering. As Corina and I discussed this trend, we realized a lot of new volunteers are looking for shorter opportunities. We are still very lucky that our retention rate is high.

Of our 1,331 long-term volunteers, 76% have been here over 2 years, while 5% have been volunteering with us for more than 10 years.

So as our friends in Minnesota are doing, we are looking at finding meaningful experiences for shorter term volunteers, holding shorter training when possible, and balancing what is doable and cost effective. The questions I continue to ask are: How will volunteers and supervisors build relationships in short-term shifts? How will the volunteers connect to our organizations, and will we be able to access the skills, energy, and/or ideas we usually get from our long-term volunteers?

The good thing about this trend is it forces us to innovate, which may result in new and valuable volunteer roles. I am thankful that as we continue to survey our City staff and VIPs, they feel a sense of pride and accomplishment in what they are doing. Our volunteers have a strong connection to their program’s mission and experience a sense of fulfillment and camaraderie with their co-volunteers.

With this in mind, we continue to train our staff on the newest trends and best practices but hope we will beat this short-term trend.

If the value of volunteering remains out of sight, it is likely also to remain out of mind.

Four internationally known volunteer management trainers were beamed into the Technology Conference Room via a first of its kind hybrid conference. VIP invited City staff and area government and nonprofit volunteer managers to train together for a one day event. The conference goal was “Shaping the Future of Your Organization” and included training on strategic vision, engaging 21st century volunteers, positioning the profession, and learning from corporate leaders.

This livestream conference offered Plano volunteer staff leaders an opportunity to engage with one another without the expense of traveling to see these great presenters. Ongoing training empowers staff to be successful leaders when directing volunteers and handling day-to-day activities.

Quotes

- "I have a real strong love for animals. This opportunity came up and it was just an instant connection. I absolutely love it. Whatever your passion is, if you can parlay that into a volunteer opportunity, it’s a win-win." - David Reed, Animal Shelter
- "I enjoy learning new things about the City. You meet new people. You develop relationships that go far beyond the volunteer opportunities." - Denise Yealy, CERT, Fire, Police
- "Volunteering gives me self-fulfillment and satisfaction knowing I can help and share my knowledge with younger students." - Abbigrae, Age 14

VIPS UNITE FOR BUILD PROJECT

The Tom Muehlenbeck Recreation Center needed help after 30 picnic table bases and 12 benches arrived unassembled.

Heading into a busy summer season, the staff knew community support would be key in getting the build project completed on time.

Volunteers from the Animal Shelter, Libraries, CERT, Police, Special Events, and Administration answered the call for help and went to work.

Supported by Boy Scout Troop 261 and the University of Texas at Dallas Health Occupation Student Association, the project was completed in one day. This intergenerational project shows the many varied skills of our volunteers.
